Boston, July 10.—David Farnsworth, the poultry raiser and magazine writer, was pardoned by the governor's council after he had begun to serve a six months' term in the Plymouth jail for shooting and unknowingly killing a chicken thief at midnight. Farnsworth is back at his farm at Bridgewater with his wife.

When the governor's stamp of approval was attached to the action of the executive council it marked the conclusion of one of the quickest pardons that was ever obtained for a prisoner in Massachusetts. The vote of the council was unanimous.

Counsel for Farnsworth had a host of witnesses present whom he intended to present, but they were not called.

The truck, with the whiskey packed in sugar boxes and covered over with canvas to look like a load of furniture, would have reached its destination had not the weight of the truck caused a small bridge over Sabattus stream to give way. Some one discovered the auto was loaded with liquor and telephoned to Sheriff Stevens.

The truck contained seventy boxes, each holding forty pints of whiskey, making a total of 350 gallons.

The jury found there was no undue influence or fraud on the part of Lady Sackville.

Lady Sackville, the person mostly interested in the outcome of the "fight for millions," was not present in court when the concluding stage of the case opened. It was stated that she felt the need of rest after her experience on the witness stand last week.

WIDE PROBE OF LOBBY ORDERED

House Prompted Largely by Allegations of Mulhall

HEARINGS ARE TO BE PUBLIC

Manufacturers Ask That About Forty Past and Present Members of Congress Be Called to Refute Charges—Fight Against Allowing Committee to Employ Counsel Is Lost

Washington, July 10.—A lobby investigation of extraordinary scope was authorized by the house, to supplement the senate probe already under way. With the passage of the Henry investigation resolution, a special committee of seven members was immediately appointed by Speaker Clark, with Representative Garrett of Tennessee as chairman. The committee will meet today to make plans for the institution of the probe at once.

While the house investigation was prompted largely by the allegations of M. M. Mulhall regarding the legislative activities of the National Association of Manufacturers, the resolution as finally passed so enlarged the scope of the inquiry that all efforts to control members of the house, or to influence legislation, will be subject to the inquisitorial power of the committee.

The speaker appointed, with Chairman Garrett, Representatives Cline, Russell and Rodenberry, Democrats; Willis and Stanford, Republicans; and Nolan, Progressive.

The special senate committee continued its inquiry into the activities of lobbyists concerned with the sugar and wool schedules of the tariff bill. The committee has not begun its probe of the Mulhall charges.

Many of the witnesses involved in the Mulhall charges are already in Washington, summoned to take the stand before the senate committee. Among these are several former members of congress and the officers of the National Association of Manufacturers. The latter have asked Senator Overman to call about forty former and present members of congress, among them former Speaker Cannon, former Senator Aldrich, former Representative Watson of Indiana and others mentioned by Mulhall.

These witnesses will undoubtedly be wanted by both the senate and house committees. Printed copies of the Mulhall correspondence have been prepared for the house inquirers.

The resolution adopted by the house provides that all of the hearings of the committee shall be open to the public.

The fight against the resolution was led by Representative Levy, who opposed particularly the reinsertion of a provision allowing the committee to employ counsel. This was done by a vote of 102 to 101.

During the debate, Representative McDermott of Illinois made a statement denouncing the use of his name in the Mulhall letters.

TO PROBE LABOR WARS

Senate Lobby Committee Calls on Gompers and Mitchell

Washington, July 11.—All the "wars" that have been fought between labor and capital, all the efforts that both have made to secure legislation which would profit them, and the tangled skein woven about their relations in the last ten years are to be investigated by congress.

The senate lobby committee in executive session last night decided that the "wars" must be inquired into.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, will appear before the committee on July 25, and a subpoena was issued last night for John Mitchell, vice president of the Federation and former head of the United Mine Workers.

At the same time the committee subpoenaed George Pope, president, and J. P. Bird, general manager, of the National Association of Manufacturers.

STORROW TO ARBITRATE

There Will Be No Strike on the Boston Elevated Railway

Boston, July 9.—With the selection of James J. Storrow, president of the Chamber of Commerce, as third member of the arbitration committee to consider the differences between the Boston Elevated and the Carpenters' union, the menace of a strike was finally and indisputably removed last evening.

Storrow's acceptance of the responsible post reached Boston from Manchester, Vt., three hours after the other two members of the board had chosen him as their chairman.

The arbitration board now stands as follows: James H. Vahey, representing the Carpenters' union and the affiliated "I." organizations, including practically all the employees; James L. Richards, executive director of the Elevated company, and Storrow as the unbiased, nonpartisan chairman and mediator.

To the Chamber of Commerce is due the credit of bringing about the amicable adjustment of a trouble that threatened serious consequences.

GREAT STRIKE SEEMS NEAR

Prospect That Hundred Thousand Trainmen Will Quit Work

New York, July 10.—With the abrupt termination of the negotiations between the board of railway managers and the representatives of the 100,000 trainmen and conductors who are demanding a 20 percent increase in wages, a mammoth strike that will partially or entirely cripple forty-two railroads north of the Potomac river and, east of Chicago appears inevitable.

As the railroad managers have refused absolutely to grant any increase, or even to submit the question to arbitration, the prospect of a general strike is more menacing than at any time since the employees formulated their demands. Should there be a general response to a strike order the situation would become one of the most serious that has been faced in the east since the crisis of 1877.

MILLIONS INVOLVED

S. & W. S. Kuhn, Inc., of this city, were forced into the hands of receivers through the failure of the first named institution to open its doors.

The closing of the First-Second National bank was ordered by Deputy Comptroller of the Currency Kane, after every effort had been made to meet the government requirements as to the legal reserve.

The Kuhn banking house has extensive interests in irrigation projects throughout the west and mines and street traction systems throughout western Pennsylvania, besides being a dominant factor in the American Water Works and Guarantee company.

GENERAL PICKETT.

The Friendship Between Him and Lincoln and Grant.

A NOVEL BATTLEFIELD SCENE.

When the Blue and the Gray Joined in a Birthday Celebration—A Meeting With Grant in Washington—Lincoln's Visit to Mrs. Pickett.

In Mrs. Pickett's introductory chapter to "The Heart of a Soldier," she revealed in the intimate letters of General George E. Pickett, C. S. A., there is an extremely interesting story. It appears that while at Richmond, just after the surrender, she was summoned to the door by a sharp rap. She gives a charming account of what followed.

"With my baby on my arm I answered the knock, opened the door and looked up at a tall, manly, and faced man in full military uniform, who, with the accent of the north, asked: 'Is this George Pickett's place?'"

"Yes, sir," I answered, "but he is not here."

"I know that, woman," he replied, "but I just wanted to see the place. I am Abraham Lincoln."

"The president?" I gasped.

"The gentleman whose head and shoulders I saw on the wall," he said, "No, woman, not that. Just Abraham Lincoln, George's old friend."

"I am George Pickett's wife, and this is his baby," I said.

My baby pointed away from me and reached his hands to Mr. Lincoln, who took him in his arms. As he did so an expression of soft, almost doting tenderness, and love, shone upon his face. It was a look that I have never seen on any other face. My baby opened his mouth, white and pink, and uttered his father's name in a low, infantile voice. As Mr. Lincoln gave the little one back to me, shaking his finger at him playfully, he said:

"Tell your father, the general, that I forgive him for the sake of that kid and those bright eyes."

Mrs. Pickett explains the interest Lincoln showed in her husband by stating that it was through Mr. Lincoln's influence that her husband received his appointment to West Point.

One impression the book conveys is that of the kindly and generous feeling that existed between Confederates and Unionists graduated from West Point who had been friends before the war. An exhibition of this feeling was made at the time of the birth of General Pickett's first baby. Mrs. Pickett, telling the story, says:

On the occasion of my son's birth bonfires were lighted in celebration all along Pickett's line. Grant sent them and sent soldiers to learn the cause. When they reported he said to General Ingalls: "Haven't we some kindling on this side of the line? Why don't we strike a light for the young Pickett?"

In a little while bonfires were flaming from the Federal line. A few days later there was taken through the lines a baby's silver service engraved, "To George E. Pickett, Jr., from his father's friends, U. S. Grant, Rufus Ingalls, George Buckley."

General Pickett, in a letter from Washington, relates another incident in which this same kindly feeling was manifested:

After breakfast we went, as arranged, to see Grant. I can't just tell you, my darling, about that visit. You'll have to wait till I see you to tell you how the warm-hearted, modest old warrior and loyal friend met me; how he took in his hand of your heart-sore soldier—poor, broken, defeated, profession gone—and, looking at him for a moment without speaking, said slowly, "Pickett, if there is anything on the top of God's green earth I can do for you, say so."

When I started to go Grant pulled down a checkbook and said, "Pickett, it seems funny, doesn't it, that I should have any money to offer, but how much do you need?"

"Not any, old fellow; not a cent, thank you," I said. "I have plenty."

"But Rufus tells me that you have begun to build a house to take the place of the one old Butler burned, and how can you build it without money? You do need some."

"I have sold some timber to pay for it," I told him, and to show my appreciation and gratitude, unobserved, I affectionately squeezed his leg, when he called out: "Rufus, it's the same old George Pickett. Instead of pulling my leg, he's squeezing it."

Sugar For The Heart.

Sugar is a splendid medicine for the heart in certain diseases of this organ. In others, such as edema, it has no effect. In the London Lancet is reported the cure of a woman of seventy-seven with "rapid, irregular, feeble pulse, cyanosis and attacks of paroxysmal breathing" by the administration of four ounces of lump sugar every twelve hours, gradually diminishing the dose, for several weeks.

THE MAHOGANY MILL.

James Lick Made Good His Bet When Seemed as a Sucker.

The story of "Lick's Folly, or the Mahogany Mill," has to do with the romance of the life of James Lick, the donor of the Lick Observatory.

In early life young Lick fell in love with the daughter of a well-to-do miller for whom he worked. When he made known his love, which was reciprocated by the girl, the miller was angry and said to have replied:

"Out, you beggar! Dye you think of my daughter, who will inherit my riches? Have you a mill like this? Have you a single penny in your purse?"

To this Lick replied that he had nothing as yet, but one day he would have a mill beside which this one would be a pigsty.

In 1851 the quiet, parsimonious James Lick surprised everybody by building a magnificent mill near San Jose. The mill was finished within a few months, highly polished, and was furnished with the best machinery possible. He made the grounds about the mill very attractive and began early to set out trees both for fruit and ornament.

Lick caused his elegant mill to be photographed without and within and sent the pictures to the miller who had scorned him in his youth.

Nineteen years after Mr. Lick built his mill, Jan. 10, 1870, he surprised the people of San Jose again by giving it to the Public Memorial society of San Jose, half the proceeds of sale to be used for a memorial hall and half to sustain a lecture course.—Exchange.

FIERCE ARAB DOGS.

Easy to Put the Big Brutes to Flight if One Knows the Trick.

The village dogs of Arabia are a real danger to strangers, whom they attack on sight without provocation. By strangers I mean any one except their own immediate owners; whether natives or not, writes Lady Lamsay in the Sunday School Times. They are, as a rule, great, powerful brutes, often very handsome, extremely fierce and capable of defending the flocks from wolves and other marauders. I have often been told that when attacked by these ferocious animals the proper thing to do is to sit down quickly on the ground, when they will at once desist.

But for my part I never had the courage to try this plan and had never seen it done during all my years of travel till last year. We had stopped to rest and eat our lunch in a village and, as I was looking out from an open balcony and saw an elderly Turk coming along between some houses opposite.

Suddenly two huge dogs, barking furiously, dashed at him from an open gateway. Instantly he dropped to the ground in a sitting position. For a moment I thought he had fallen and expected to see the dogs on top of him. To my astonishment they turned and fled, their tails between their legs.

Before they could return, if they would have done so, a couple of villagers appeared, helped the old fellow to his feet and accompanied him, out of the range of my vision.

Not Mysticism, but Mathematics.

Mrs. Madison, whose latest hobby is the psychology and the esoteric influence of colors, was deeply gratified when her husband admitted without urging that there might be something in her theory after all.

"Dawson put me on to it today, at the farm," Mr. Madison continued.

"Dawson?" questioned Mrs. Madison, amazed, for Dawson is the manager of her husband's stables and unknown among psychologists.

Mr. Madison nodded. "He says the boys eat more than the grays."

"Really?" It was a humble victory, but Mrs. Madison's face glowed with triumph. "How does Dawson account for it?"

"There are ten more boys than grays," said Mr. Madison.—Youth's Companion.

Going In For Methusalem's Record.

An ambitious new citizen, with the habit of taking literally the every day expressions of Americans, obtained a position as train caller at the Union station.

One day he had just called, "All aboard for Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Baltimore and New York."

A man ran up to him and almost breathlessly asked, "I want the last train out for Cleveland?"

The perplexed caller exclaimed, "What, you should live so long?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

BASEBALL STRATEGY.

A Game That Was Won by Two Players and a Live Snake.

Tommy Tucker lost a game for Washington to Chicago once and started a battle all because of a lick Bill Dahlen and Bill Everett put up on him.

Tom never did like snakes. Indeed, he held them in abhorrence, and in some way Dahlen discovered this. Washington was to play Chicago that afternoon, and during the morning practice on the west side grounds Dahlen and Everett discovered a small garter snake and treasured it up.

About the fourth inning Everett cracked out a hit, and as soon as he landed on first base Dahlen, ignoring his usual custom, ran out to coach, and a moment later he slipped the harmless little reptile to Everett, who dropped it into Tucker's hip pocket.

Tommy discovered the snake just as the pitcher was delivering the ball and, with a yelp, he deserted first base. The batter had hit to the shortstop, who gathered on the ball on the run and started to throw to second, but was too late and threw toward first. Tommy was twenty feet off the base, jumped up and down and bunting for something with which to kill that snake, and the ball went to the stands and Chicago scored four runs before the inning ended.

Tucker protested wildly, but the umpire couldn't do anything about snakes in the rule book and let it go at that.

GET IN THE SUNSHINE.

Then Profit by the Shadows in Which You Have Lingered.

If you are in a hurry don't get behind a lame man. "Utch your chariot to a star." Beware of the sneerer and the scoffer. Seek the man who believes in things that are good and who is trying to make everything else better by deeds and words.

Come into the sunshine for a little while. It is a good world after all. You have had hard luck, ill health and hard blows, but open your ledger and see if the credit doesn't overbalance the debit side.

Be frank with yourself and see how much of the debts can be charged to your own fault—a lack of foresight, trusting the unworthy, overreaching selfishness, stupidity, extravagance, failure to learn by experience or refusal to profit by advice.

Take a few precious moments for self-examination. Don't mourn because some one who started in life with fewer advantages than you had has done so much better. Think of those you have left behind in the race. Yours must be a hopeless case if you are lost in line.

Happiness is from within, not from without. No greater happiness can be found than that which comes from the sweet content of right thinking, right living and a good conscience. Try it. See how warm and inviting its sunshine is.—John A. Stetson in Leslie's.

Applied Legal Tactics.

A gray haired lawyer employed a laugh at the expense of his friend, an upturn bank cashier, the other day.

The youngest member of the law firm, also known to the cashier, thinking possibly to make the latter the butt of a practical joke, had attempted without success to change a counterfeit fifty cent piece at the window.

Told of the incident an hour later the elderly lawyer reached into his pocket and drew out a number of coins.

"When you are weak on any one point," he said, "as he selected $150 from the handful, 'try burying it under as much other evidence as may be adjudged relevant—in short, let me have that bad half—confuse the question at issue. Here, Jimmie," calling an office boy, "take this change down to Mr. —, the cashier, and get a two dollar bill."

And the boy did.—New York Sun.

Wudna Suit the Kilt.

In the early days of the territorial army there was a thorn in recruiting for it. In one part of the highlands almost every man in the district joined the local battalion of "kilts," and the men were shamed on without medical examination, it being quite usual in some country districts to wait until the annual camp before medically examining recruits. On arrival in camp it was noticed that one man was wearing the kilt of drill instead of the regulation kilt, and, being asked the reason, he explained that he had left his kilt at home. "Why on earth did you do that?" inquired his company officer.

"Well, you see, sir," replied the recruit. "I'm afraid I wudna suit the kilt vera well, as I've got a wooden leg."—Glasgow News.

Difficulties of the Naturalist.

At one end or the other of every animal lies a danger which makes the closest investigation impossible. To study the mule we must hold him by the head, but to study the bull we must have a tall pole as a vantage point.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE GAME OF WAR.

Some of the Things That Are Forbidden by Civilized Nations.

It is not generally realized that the game of war is hedged round by as many restrictions as a boxing contest under Queensberry rules. These regulations, which are under the sanction of all the civilized countries of the world, are designed to insure fair play for the combatants.

When it is intended to bombard a place due notice should be given, so that all women and children may be removed to a place of safety, and every care must be taken to spare churches and hospitals, as well as all charitable or educational buildings.

All chaplains, doctors and nurses are protected in every possible way and are not to be taken prisoners or in any way injured.

Any soldier robbing or mutilating an enemy is liable to be shot without trial, and death is the penalty for wounding or killing a disabled man.

The bodies of the enemy are to be carefully searched before burial, and any articles found on them which might lead to their identification are to be sent to the proper quarters.

Explosive bullets must not be used, and quarter must be given to the enemy whether he asks for it or not. In an attack on the enemy there must be no concealment of the distinctive signs of the regiments, and the use of poisons for polluting drinking water is strictly forbidden.—London Answers.

THE "CITY OF HOMER."

Reminders of the Ancient Architectural Glory of Smyrna.

Architecturally Smyrna must have degenerated since the ancient days, for we are told that then the streets were broad and handsome, well paved and running at right angles with each other. There were a number of squares and porticoes and public libraries, a museum, a stadium in which Olympic games were celebrated with great enthusiasm, a grand music hall or odeon, a harbor and many temples, of which the most famous was that of the Olympian Jupiter, in which the reigning emperor was practically the god worshipped.

The ancient Smyrniotes were incredibly proud of their city. They called it the "First of Asia," though the Ephesians violently disputed this claim. The inhabitants also called their city the "City of Homer," who they claimed had been born and brought up beside their sacred river Meles.

They put his image upon a coin, which they called a homerion, a name given to one of their temples. Enormous fragments yet remain showing what tremendous buildings once occupied the broad plateau on the summit of the acropolis, and as one rebuilds in imagination these wonderful piles he can easily forgive the Smyrniotes of old for their grandiloquent praise of their city and its beautiful crown.—Christian Herald.

The Only Safe Courts.

There is a supreme court justice in New York city who is locally noted for his severity. If he can prevent it no guilty man shall escape, and in his court very few of them do.

Last fall a man was on trial before him for forgery. The prosecution, so it seemed to most of the spectators, failed to make out a very good case. Nevertheless the jury came in with a verdict of guilty.

Later the foreman of the jury was talking about the case with a friend who had heard some of the testimony.

"We weren't certain that we ought to convict either," said the foreman, in explanation, "but after listening to his honor's charge, all of us realized that if we acquitted that fellow we'd be guilty of contempt of court."—Saturday Evening Post.

Dangerous Dust.

Dust is more dangerous than draft. The dust of the house is more dangerous than the dust of the street. It is in dry, windy weather that colds, influenza, bronchitis, tonsillitis and consumption are caught. For every speck of dust is an aeroplane with an army of disease germs as passengers. Sunlight destroys them; they thrive in darkness. The broom and duster of the housewife stir them up from their breeding places in dark recesses, and the open windows of the dining room blow them all about the house.—New York World.

Testing.

"Why do you put your finger on that paint? Don't you see the sign 'Fresh Paint'?"

"Yes," replied the man with eccentric ideas. "But I can't keep from testing it and thinking what a convenience it would be if fresh eggs could be tested the same way."—Washington Star.

On the Stage.

Floresie—Of course, in the theatrical profession it doesn't matter how often lovers quarrel. Gerlie—Why so? Floresie—Because they make up every night and twice on matinee days.—London Tit-Bits.

One They Both Love.

George—Mabel and Jack's marriage seems an ideal one—such a perfect union of hearts! The Girl—Yes; he adores Mabel, and so does she.—Truth.

Must Need It.

"He needs money badly."

"Up against it, eh?"

"Must be. He's thinking of marrying for it."—Detroit Free Press.

When All Is Holiday There are no holidays.—Charles Lamb.

Cold Comfort.

"Oh, papa, Mr. Spooner proposed last night."

"Are you sure he loves you?"

"He said he'd die for me, papa."

"Well, you'll both die if you try to live on the salary he's getting."—Boston Transcript.

Too Much For Webster.

In the somewhat famous case of Mrs. Bogen's will which was tried in the supreme court many years ago, Daniel Webster appeared as counsel for the appellant.

Mrs. Bogen, wife of the Rev. William Greenough, was a very self-possessed witness. Notwithstanding Mr. Webster's repeated efforts to disconcert her, she returned the even tenor of her way until Webster, becoming quite foolish of the result, accused her of lying.

Apparently in great agitation, and drawing out his large snuffbox, thrust his thumb and finger to the very bottom, drew it up with gusto, and then, extracting from his pocket a very large handkerchief, he blew his nose with a report that rang distinct and loud through the crowded hall.

He then asked, "Mrs. Greenough, was Mrs. Bogen, a neat woman?"

"I cannot give you the full information as to that, sir. She had nose very very dirty," replied the witness.

"What was that, ma'am?"

"She took snuff!"—Boston Herald.

Mother's Opinion.

Here is one that was told at a banquet the other evening by Sec. Frank R. Knight, Esq., which shows that little Willie can always be depended on for a frank expression.

Some time ago, according to the secretary, little Willie, who lives in the suburbs of a big city, excitedly rushed into the house and sought his mother.

"Oh, mamma!" he exclaimed on finding the food "parrot," "the lady next door wanted to give me a penny!"

"Give you a penny," wonderfully responded mother, "what for?"

"She told me that she would give me a penny," answered Willie, "if I would tell her what you said about her."

"Mercy, child!" cried the mother, with a startled expression. "You didn't tell her, did you?"

"No, mamma," was the joyful rejoinder of Willie. "I told her that what you said about her was worth a dollar."

Took Preventions.

Here's one vouchered for by Manager Derr of the Federal hotel: "A friend of mine," says the voracious chronicler, "went into the office of a dentist the other day to have several teeth extracted."

"Suppose I ought to take something to deaden the pain, but I'm afraid of this gas you use," said the prospective patient.

The dentist reassured him and wound up with "You'll only be unconscious for two or three minutes at the most. The patient took out his pocketbook."

"Never mind that now," said the dentist, "you can pay me when I've finished."

"I wasn't going to pay you," exclaimed the patient. "I was going to count my money."—Kansas City Journal.

Quick Wit And Limber Legs.

"If you kiss me again," declared Miss Lovely firmly, "I shall tell father."

"That's an old tale," replied the bold, bad young man. "Any way I'll warn it," and he kissed her.

Miss Lovely sprang to her feet. "I shall tell father," she said, and left the room.

"Father," she said softly to her parent when she got outside, "Mr. Bolder wants to see your new gun."

"All right. I'll take it to him," said her father, and two minutes later he appeared in the doorway with his gun in hand.

There was a crash of breaking glass as Mr. Bolder dived through the window and departed in all haste for the railway station.

Obeying Orders.

An army officer in his expense list on government service, put down:

"Porter, 10 cents."

The officer was requested to report to his war office, where he was told:

"While executing public duty refreshments are not chargeable to the nation."

"The item does not represent refreshment," he replied, "but a fee to a carrier."

"You should have said 'porterage,' was then explained to him.

When the officer had occasion to take a taxi, remembering instructions, he wrote in his accounts:

"Cabbage, 60 cents."—New York Globe.

He Managed It.

Gibbs—I went on a railway journey the other day and took a box of cigars with me.

Nibbs—Well, I suppose you had a good smoke?

Gibbs—Aye, I had that; but when the train had started I found I had no matches.

Nibbs—No matches, and yet you enjoyed a good smoke? How did you manage for a light?

Gibbs—Well, you see, I opened the box, took out one, and that smoke the box a cigar lighter.

Love's Torments.

Neighbor—What's Mamie crying about?

Mother—That fortune-teller told her that she'd go to her grave a tall, handsome, dark woman.

Neighbor—Well, ain't that a good fortune?

Mother—Yer'd think so; but now she's broke-hearted at the thought of giving up the ugly, little, sawed-off, sandy-haired bricklayer she's in love with.—Judge.

Woman's Sense of Humor.—Eve had just come in from the wood, where she had gathered unto herself a fine new costume of autumn leaves.

"How do you like my new dress, Adie?" she said, striking an attitude before him.

"It's a peach," said Adam admiringly.

"No, dear, it's a maple," returned Eve.

It was about this time that it began to be rumored about that women have no sense of humor.—Hippocrit's Magazine.

AN ANECDOTE OF MCKINLEY.

His Gentle Rebuke to a Department Chief's Subordinate.

President McKinley's scrupulous loyalty to his cabinet officers is spoken of as one of his characteristics. It is said that he never went over the heads of his secretaries to consult an assistant, but held each to responsibility for his department.

Of all the events of his administration probably none was a source of more anxiety to him than the decision of the supreme court on the status of the colonies. It was a matter of great moment whether the highest judicial body should uphold the view of the administration that the constitution sanctioned the possession of colonies which were not granted full representation. There were conflicting rumors and forecasts of the color of the decision, and these added to the tension felt at Washington. Shortly before the announcement of the finding of the court a subordinate officer of one of the departments appeared at the White House at an unusual hour and insisted upon seeing the president on the plea of important business. Having been admitted, he came at once to his errand.

"Mr. President, I have some good news for you. I have just learned authoritatively that the decision of the supreme court is to be in your favor."

He fairly glowed with the importance of his welcome message.

"Thank you," said Mr. McKinley quietly. "That is good news. But have you informed your chief?"

"No, Mr. President. I thought you ought to be the first to know it."

"Well, Mr. —, I'm sorry for that. Now, will you please do me the favor to go at once to your chief and give him the information so that he may communicate it to me?"—Silas Harrison in Century.

A Voice Without a Soul.

Tibet's daili lama was greatly disturbed by the first photograph he saw. Edmund Carder, when in Lassa with the Younghusband expedition, heard from the Nepalese resident how he had recently brought the uncanny toy as a present from the maharajah of Nepal to the priest king. The daili lama walked around it uneasily as it blared forth an English band piece and an indecent Bhutanese song. Then he thought for a long while, and finally said he could not live with this voice without a soul. So it was passed on to somebody else.

FACE TO FACE COURTESY.

Good telephone service depends largely upon mutual courtesy. The telephone is more useful to those who talk as if face to face, for civility removes difficulties and facilitates the promptest possible connections.

As in other intercourse, it often happens that two or more people wish to talk with the same person at the same time. Without courtesy confusion is inevitable, and the confusion is greater when the people cannot see each other.

The operator must be patient and polite under all circumstances, but they will do better work if they meet patience and politeness on the part of telephone users.

The Bell Telephone service enters intimately into the social and business life of each individual. The best results come through the practice of mutual courtesy.

President Wilson at Gettysburg.

Lincoln's Gettysburg speech is still the famous address of the century, but President Wilson came in a good second. He said in part: "Look around you upon the field of Gettysburg! Picture the array, the fierce heats and agony of battle, columns hurled against columns, battery following to battery! Valor! Yes! Greater no man shall see in war; and self-sacrifice, and loss to the uttermost; the high righteousness of exalted devotion which does not count the cost. We are made by these things, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation—the blood and sacrifice of multitudes of unknown men lifted to a great stature in the view of all generations by knowing no fault to their worthy willingness to serve. In answer, thus marshaled from the ranks of free men you will see, as it were, a nation embattled, the leaders and the led, and may know, if you will, how little except to form its action differs in days of peace from its action in days of war."

Railroad Strike.

A strike of vast proportions is again threatened on the eastern railroads. The 100,000 conductors and trainmen on these roads have made a demand for an increase in wages of $12,000,000, or 20 per cent. per annum.

The railroads, acting in the interest of the public as a whole, have refused to grant any increase to these employees, who, in 1910, received advances in pay amounting to $30,000,000 per annum. A strike of conductors and trainmen would mean that practically every road in the eastern territory would be tied up; in their strike ballad there is this paragraph: "Unless you are prepared to support your vote by your action, do not vote for carrying the matter forward."

His Best Work.

A young novelist had a hard struggle to earn enough to support himself and his wife, who held his talents in poor esteem and often urged him to try something else. Sometimes she was a little bit hungry and seldom ever had a well-made garment to wear.

After a little while he began to make a little money on his writings and there came a day when he could write out a check for $100 and give it to his wife to buy herself some new clothes.

Her eyes filled with tears when she read it. Finally she managed to say: "James, darling, I'll take back all the mean things I ever said about your work. This is the best thing you ever wrote!"

"What is the real difference between me and my toadstool?"

"One is a feast and the other is a funeral."—Baltimore American.
